This two-day, three-track conference will present timely information for water utility executives and managers, treatment plant operators, scientists, researchers, and engineers. There are sessions designed for engineers, researchers, water agencies, lawyers, academics, regulators, elected officials and military representatives, board members and city council members.

TRACK ONE will focus on occurrences, environmental fate, treatment, effects and public perception of emerging contaminants.

TRACK TWO will focus on nanotechnology, endocrine disruptors, perchlorate, and other current topics focusing on detection, treatment, and contamination levels and effects.

TRACK THREE will focus on emergency response. Dr. Lucy Jones, Chief Scientist USGS Multi-Hazard for Southern California, Dr. Anne Wien, USGS Operations Research Analyst, and Margaret Vinci, Caltech Earthquake Programs, will discuss Ark Storm, economic impacts and other issues facing water providers. On the second day the program will design a tabletop exercise and then execute the scenario in the afternoon.

250 to 300 people are expected to attend the November 3-4, 2010 Water Quality & Regulatory Conference, to be held at the Doubletree Hotel and Conference Center, 222 North Vineyard, Ontario, Calif. 50 leading experts will present the latest information on water quality, technology and emerging contaminants information. Poster presentations and approximately 35 vendors and agencies will be on hand in the exhibit hall. (Space is limited)

Up to 20 DHS contact hours for water plant and wastewater plant operators are available, as well as MCLE credits for attorneys. Abstracts are still being accepted until August 31. Contact Jo McAndrews, 951-787-9267, or sayhijo@empirenet.com for more information.
